Properly designed and made CAD solutions should be based on open standards, to maximize interoperability and reduce the effort required to support the same solution. The world is currently going through a CAD transition. With software as a service, or SAAS, rapidly becoming the norm in the CAD market, desktop CAD applications have been under siege for years. The traditional "on premise" model, with its heavyweight CAD software running on expensive and heavy computers, is becoming less and less popular, as business owners and decision makers are shifting their desktop CAD workload to the cloud. As a result, traditional desktop CAD systems are increasingly outdated, and also vulnerable to cyberattacks. A security review of Autodesk AutoCAD LT software for Windows operating systems (OS) indicates that the software is susceptible to several severe vulnerabilities, as well as significant network connectivity issues, such as the exposure of enterprise information, including network secrets and private keys. "As a leader in the design, engineering and construction industries, Autodesk is committed to developing the best-in-class software solutions to meet the unique needs of our customers and partners," said Doug Drexler, Autodesk director of product management. "We look forward to ensuring AutoCAD LT users are protected from exploitation of these identified vulnerabilities, by conducting timely updates and incorporating new security measures as the industry moves forward." Technical Details of the vulnerabilities

Vulnerability Type: Application-Level Vulnerabilities

Affected: The issues described below are specific to the version and build number of AutoCAD LT 2018 for Windows.

A newer version of the software is not affected. See the section "Affected Software Versions" below for more details.

Vulnerability Description: An attacker can exploit the vulnerabilities in the legacy binary component ("binary") of the editor to gain access to the C:\ProgramData folder. If an attacker can exploit this vulnerability, an attacker could potentially modify the registry, launch programs or delete data. In the context of a software update, the vulnerabilities can cause a denial of service (preventing legitimate users from launching the software), or potentially reveal enterprise information, including network secrets and private keys.

Vulnerabilities Acknowledgement: Autodesk has made reasonable efforts to ensure the vulnerability has been addressed and is not exploitable by unauthorized persons. No fixes are available. Severity Level: Critical

AutoCAD contains many macros in the format of Visual LISP, which allow instructions to be written to execute on a computer. Visual LISP macros are similar to those used in other areas of AutoCAD. AutoCAD contains native applications written in Visual Studio, .NET, and ObjectARX.

Many of AutoCAD's features can be accessed through scripting or programming languages. History AutoCAD was introduced in 1987. The first version of AutoCAD ran on MS-DOS and IBM PC compatible operating systems. Licensing

Dr. Eric Halvorson just returned from a two-week stay at the Munk Centre for Brain Health in Toronto, and what he saw was less than encouraging. He was diagnosed with several types of cancer — all in the sense of his being diagnosed with multiple cancers. Halvorson, a Vancouver-based physician and comedian, is currently playing the newly reopened Edinburgh Fringe Festival. It was at this festival, in 2017, that he learned of his first diagnosis — a case of a rare brain tumour called a glioblastoma. Halvorson is just now coming to terms with the news that the brain tumour has returned, and it's spreading. In a video he posted to Facebook this week, he admitted he's frustrated by the lack of progress in the battle against cancer. "I spent the past two weeks in the Munk Centre in Toronto," he ca3bfb1094

The year 2020 A running blog about my time in Iraq, focusing on what's happening here in the Baghdad neighbourhoods of Kadhimain and Karkh. I'm currently a teacher at a high school in Kadhimain. Wednesday, January 8, 2011 Day 12 - Democracy Today we started Democracy, an elective for high school students in Baghdad. In fact, many Iraqis started their day this way, with a visit to a polling station. The population of Baghdad is approximately 4.5 million, with around 3.3 million registered voters. The breakdown is as follows: 2.4 million Shiites 0.9 million Sunnis 1.8 million Kurds It is worth noting that Shiites are in a majority in the Baghdad neighbourhoods of Kadhimain and Karkh, whereas Sunnis are in a majority in the majority of Baghdad. Here are some interesting facts: At the time of writing, the election is 1.5 hours from now. In the past elections, several riots have been sparked by people not being able to vote at their preferred location (no matter what their party). The IRT is staying at their office for the duration of the day. Vote rigging is in the air. There is a huge police presence, not to mention the long lines of people trying to vote. Shiites think that the Sunnis are rigging the votes, as some Shiites are waiting in long lines, but they haven't been successful in finding evidence to back their claim. As it's only 1.5 hours away, I wouldn't expect the election to be rigged. I am also going to post the election results when I get them. In the meantime, I'll be back tomorrow with another entry. 8 comments: Great stuff. I'm very happy you are here. It seems to me that right after this USP something amazing is going to happen. Don't you think so? And, by the way, I'm looking forward to the election results. See
