According to the documentation for.bufferData(), data() needs to be a number type. Why isn't data() a standard behaviour? What is the standard behaviour and are there any issues that arise by this approach 1cdb3666d

How can I set the position of an element in CSS? Suppose we have a div like this: `text1`

Now, in CSS I have: `#text1 { position: relative; width: 400px; height: 100px; left: 100px; top: 100px; background: red; }` But it will only show the top-right corner of the `text1`. How can I set its top-left corner to be 100px? A: You could use the following: `#text1 { position: absolute; top: 100px; left: 100px; background: red; }` Although, this would probably be considered to be "the wrong way" and not be what you are actually after. Just a "Fiddle": A: If you want to position absolute elements relative to their parent, you'll need to either define the top-left position of their parent element or insert them after their parent element. If you are going to be defining these elements everywhere, you can use absolute positioning and "forget" about the actual box model entirely. For example: `#container {` position: absolute; width: 400px; height:

position: absolute; width: 400px; height:
100px; left: 100px; top: 100px; background:
red; } #text2 {
