I have created a class in my app, and my function "output()" is overridden in the Model Class. Everything works fine, until I use the function "output()" of a django template. The function "output()" is called in a django template, where the original output() of the function is supposed to render the output, but instead the output of the function is rendered in the django template. My Class: import datetime import math from django.utils.timezone import utc from django.db import models from django.contrib.sites.models import Site from django.utils.translation import ugettext as _ import os def output(self): print('string1') print(string2) @models.permalink class Main(models.Model): title = models.CharField(max_length=60, verbose_name=_('Title')) meta_keywords = models.CharField(max_length=255, blank=True, verbose_name=_('Meta Keywords')) meta_description = models.CharField(max_length=255, blank=True, verbose_name=_('Meta Description')) url = models.URLField(max_length=255, blank=True, verbose_name=_('Url')) active = models.BooleanField(default=True, verbose_name=_('Active')) def output(self): return'string1' The django template: {% load i18n %} {% load myapp %} {% extends "layout.html" %} {% block content %} {{ home.title }} 6d1f23a050
